Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 30 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Continuing unsettled but very mild.

Today:
Cloudy and very mild with rain and drizzle across England and Wales, most persistent across western hills. Heavy showers across Northern Ireland and Scotland clearing to leave a brighter afternoon. Windy for many.

Tonight:
Rain, heavy at times, moving northwards across northern England, Northern Ireland and Scotland. Further rain moving eastwards across southern England and Wales. Windy in the west with coastal gales. Mild.

Friday:
Rain persisting across Scotland but slowly easing. Brighter skies developing elsewhere. Windy across central parts with a risk of gales on coasts and hills at first. Remaining very mild.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Mild and breezy on Saturday with some rain for a time towards the northwest. Thereafter temperatures remain nearer normal, with further rain and showers, mostly across western areas.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.